

SCIO

The Terrain Stress Analyser and Rebalacer

The Quantum SCIO (SCIO- to know) is a safe, powerful bio-feedback device designed for natural healing. It works holistically and naturopathically to stimulate and harness the tremendous self-healing capacity of the human system. All interactions take place within the body's natural operating parameters, thus reinforcing and respecting the body innate wisdom.

Naturopaths recognize that if stressors are identified and removed, the appropriate nutritional inputs are provided and the energetic template restored that improving health will follow as a natural consequence. The SCIO is facilitated to assist in identifying the first two and to effect the third.

Testing

The SCIO test provides a “reactivity response” to stressors: this is an automated version of asking the body questions about the stress sources and areas affected. This includes hints as to a wide spectrum of stressors (pathogens, allergens, nutritional deficiencies, emotions), imbalanced systems and stressed organs. The information is designed to complement and broaden practitioner skills. The responses provide information to dialogue with the client about- as part of the process of understanding what is created dysfunction. Responses can come from the whole of the clients being- from all the diverse range of our internal activities- from the stresses in the past, present, future concerns, emotions, strong concerns of others close to use etc. Whilst some issues may show prominently in the test scores, deeper (masked, chronic, adapted) issues benefit from pattern finding, the special

Therapy

The suite of therapies within the SCIO has developed from expert practitioner requests. This is in keeping with clients responding optimally to different therapies as individuals and at different stages of their process. Many practitioners are also aware that more than one input is often necessary to optimize their effectiveness. Clients may have disturbances to health in any of their physical, mental, emotional or spiritual aspects.

In particular the nature and persistence of current stressors results to disturbances of our energetic template: the blueprint or software for our functioning. Based on the test results the SCIO system will suggest optimal therapies as well as allowing the therapist to select their own. In all cases the client response is continuously monitored and the treatment parameters automatically adjusted. The gentle, homeopathic like approach of the SCIO therapies in providing information is a critical factor for restoration of the correct functioning of processes. It is the very nature of the self actualizing aspect of our beings that this input will be joyously received.

How it works

The SCIO can access a lot of the communication going on inside the body. All processes, both physical and mental are steered by our inner communication system. This is mostly accomplished through signals controlled by the brain and through the meridians. With the SCIO one can "re-program" brain signals by transmitting frequencies through a harness on the head. In addition, using conductive wrist-straps and ankle-straps one can transmit stress balancing frequencies directly to the various organs and systems.

With the SCIO one can support back the body to its optimal way of functioning- by stress reduction/rebalancing. Most treatment programs simply trigger the body's own functions to normalize them/ solve a problem. These processes work for many hours after a treatment, which can explain why one is often a little tired and worn out after a treatment. One may not feel anything during the actual treatment, and there is no danger of side-effects afterwards. There have been several million treatments worldwide, and the results have been startlingly good.